

“And in fact for both public television and public radio, the largest support that comes to us by far is from viewers like you. So if you are listening and you are a supporter of public television or public radio thank you very much. If you aren’t yet a supporter, think about it, because this is an important presence in Arizona. This is an important presence in this community. I can tell you as I’ve traveled around this country and I’ve met people involved with public television and public radio stations in many different communities. The one thing that is similar is this belief that public television and public radio do, in fact, represent a very different part of broadcast media and really does represent service to the community in such a deep and profound way. So if you care about it, then make a call. Thanks.”

- Paula Kerger, PBS President and CEO